artpay

CHOOSING A PAYMENT PROVIDER

10 questions before you sign

Ask them before the contract, not after the first stuck payment. Write the answers down: they tell you more than any price list.

Cost and routes

Ask for answers in writing, for your real route and volume.

01 What is the full cost of my route, in writing?

Fee, conversion and charges along the route. Ask for one number: the amount that lands.

02 How is conversion priced?

Against which reference rate, with what margin, and is it shown before you confirm?

03 Who pays the charges along the route?

Sender, receiver or shared. It decides whether your supplier receives the full invoice amount.

04 What are the cut-off times?

Per currency and per route. A payment sent after cut-off on Friday often starts moving on Monday.

Documents, operations and exit

The questions that matter on the day something goes wrong.

05 Which documents do you need to open the account?

A full list up front: company documents, ownership, business description, expected volumes.

06 What will you ask for on ongoing payments?

Contracts, invoices, proof of work. Which payments trigger questions and how fast you need to answer.

07 Who traces a stalled payment?

A named team or person, the channel, and the time to first update.

08 Where are client funds held?

Which partner institutions hold the money, in which countries and currencies.

09 What reporting will my accountant receive?

Statements, payment confirmations and exports in a format your bookkeeping accepts.

10 How do I leave?

Notice period, closing fees and how fast remaining funds are returned.

artpay

Want our answers to all ten?

Send us your route and expected volume. We will answer every question above in writing, for your case, before you sign anything.

artpay.co/contact

ArtPay provides international payment infrastructure for business: accounts, corporate cards and cross-border settlements. This document is general information, not financial, legal or tax advice. Adapt every control to your company's own policies, limits and regulatory obligations.